

I am not in favor of any ruling which will reduce the effect of the current Indiana Telephone Privacy law protections. Because of the strength of our law, my husband and I are no longer hesitant to answer any phone call received after 5 pm. Before this law took effect, we received an average of 2-3 calls DAILY. Caller ID does not help as so many of the clearing houses now block their identification. The Indiana law as it currently stands has done a wonderful job of allowing us to look forward to phone calls rather than dreading hearing the phone ring and wondering who we're going to have to hang up on since they won't take no for an answer.
